

Biography - Rebecca Wilson BA MSc

Rebecca Wilson has been a Teaching Fellow in Aviation Psychology at Cranfield University since 2001, after obtaining degrees in Psychology and English from University College Northampton, and her MS in Applied Psychology from Cranfield University. She is completing research for her doctoral program in passenger safety and aircraft evacuation under Professor Helen Muir. Rebecca is a graduate member of The British Psychology Society and The Ergonomics Society and is actively working towards chartered/registered member status of these professional bodies. Her most recent projects have been commissioned by UK, European and international clients.