

Stefano Burigat
Biographical sketch

Dr. Stefano Burigat is assistant professor at the University of Udine, Italy, where he teaches Mobile Application Design, and he is member of the Human-Computer Interaction Laboratory (<http://hcilab.uniud.it>). His main research activity is in the area of human-computer interaction, with a focus on topics such as navigation in 3D virtual environments, information presentation on mobile devices, mobile interface design and evaluation, positioning techniques for indoor and outdoor navigation. He is author of several internationally refereed publications on these topics and he is reviewer for major international conferences and journals. He has been involved in research projects financed by the European Union (EU), the US Federal Aviation Administration (FAA), and the Italian Ministry of University and Research (MIUR).