

Monroe Shumate is part of the research and development team within Johns Manville. He is currently a manager for technical service and research focusing on new product development. He has a BS and MS in Ceramic Engineering from the University of Illinois. He started his career with JM in 1977 and has been involved with aerospace programs since 1988.