

Matthias Waimer

is a Research Engineer working at the Institute of Structures and Design of the German Aerospace Center (DLR). His focus of research is the numerical crash simulation of composite fuselage structures. He is involved in industrial projects and has developed crash concepts for future composite fuselage structures of transport aircraft. Prior to joining the DLR in 2006, he studied Aerospace Engineering at the University of Stuttgart (Germany).