

Graham Greene

Graham Greene is a Research Project Manager with the UK Civil Aviation Authority with specialist interests in fire and cabin safety. The Civil Aviation Authority regards fire as a significant safety risk, particularly the threat posed by lithium batteries and is undertaking a number of initiatives to reduce risks. Graham is a member of the Cabin Safety Research Technical Group and is the UK representative to the European Aviation Research Partnership Group that coordinates safety research in Europe with EASA.