

Thomas Bloxham

Elevate will present new single cell testing data, across multiple cell variants, with a focus on how these results can be applied to safety ecosystem models and event forecasting. In addition the differences in implications between errors on a test result due to sample size, and inherent distributions of failure outcomes will be discussed. These results will be presented alongside information about the planned Elevate safety strategy showing how each stage of testing can inform safety outcomes across a fleet.