

Simon Hind is a Researcher Council Officer in the Composite Products Team within the Structures Materials and Manufacturing lab in the Aerospace Research Center of the National Research Council of Canada where he has been employed since 2002. His areas of expertise include composite materials manufacturing process development, materials testing, adhesive bonding, and aerospace fire testing. Simon has managed numerous projects related to aircraft rescue and firefighting.