

FEI XIE is the research engineer for the test center of CAAC (Civil Aviation Administration of China) over ten years. He has BA, MA and Ph.D degrees in polymer material science and engineering. His research has included: polymer processing engineering, polymer blends, fire barrier materials, aircraft cabin material testing technology, aircraft engine fire protection. His research focused on the aircraft cabin material safety, including technology, specifications, standards and airworthiness management.